The Hello Kitty Murder

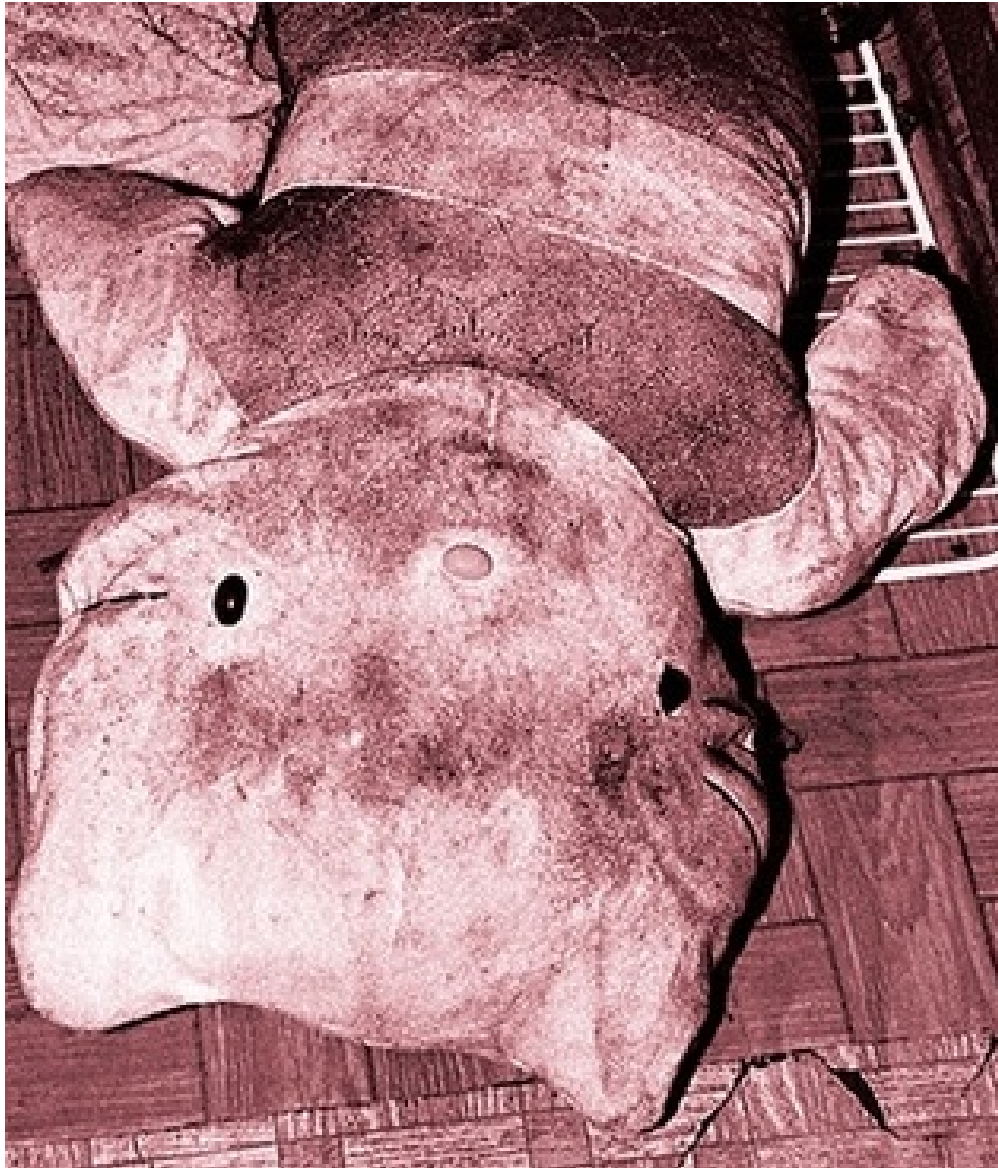

-The Mermaid and the Ghost of a Tortured Woman-

In 1999, a 14 year old girl walked into a police station, complaining of being haunted by a woman in her apartment.

On investigation, the police found a woman's skull, stuffed into a 'Hello Kitty' mermaid doll.

Soon, a disturbing crime came to light, a story of sick and twisted torture.

□ Stuffed Hello Kitty Mermaid toy.

In May 1999, fourteen year old "Ah Fong" (name changed) walked into a police station in the Tsim Sha Tsui area of Hong Kong. She told the attending officers that she was being haunted by the ghost of a young woman she had helped torture.

A fairly far fetched story – ghosts and torture, but still the officers followed up on Fong's story.

When they investigated a third floor flat, located in the middle of the Tsim Sha Tsui shopping district, they found every indication of a shocking crime. There was evidence of a corpse hidden about the apartment, parts of internal organs kept in the fridge, and some teeth were located.

Most shocking of all was the discovery of a human skull, found in a large, stuffed 'Hello Kitty' mermaid toy.

Three men and Fong were arrested and soon the full scale of the horrific crime came to light.

□ Fan Man-yee aka Ah Map.

The victim was 23 year old Fan Man-yee, also known as Ah Map. Ah Map had been left to a girl's home as a child, after being abandoned by her parents. By the time she was 16, she had turned to a life of small crime, sex for sale and various addictions.

She worked the assorted clubs and brothels of the Tsim Sha Tsui/Kowloon district of Hong Kong, and many of her clientele were known in the various circles of the Chinese underground societies.

Ah Map met 34 year old Chan Man-lok in 1997, at one of the various brothels she worked in. He became a regular client, and had violent tendencies when he was on one of his many methamphetamine binges.

It must have been after one of these violent outbursts that Ah Map felt she did not want to see Chan again. Unfortunately she made a mistake; she stole his wallet which contained $4000. Although she did pay back the money, and $10,000 in interest, Chan still wanted more.

Ah Map was unable to pay the extra $16,000 Chan demanded, so on 17th March, 1999, Map was located and abducted from her home by two of Chan's accomplices, Leung Shing-cho (27) and Leung Wai-lun (21).

Ah Map had now entered a world of depravity, torture and eventually, death.

During the investigation and trial Ah Fong, the fourteen year old girl who led police to the crime, gave intricate details on what horrors Ah Map went through over the next month, leading up to her death. She was there for the entire event, she was Chan's girlfriend.

Originally Chan had abducted Ah Map in order to hold her and work her, taking all of her earnings until the debt had been repaid in full. However, with the repeated beatings Map suffered, no one really wanted to pay for the services, so Chan and his two friends used her as a personal play thing instead

□ The 3rd floor flat Ah Map was held in.

At first the torture was limited to repeated beatings, first with bare hands, but soon this escalated to hitting her with furniture and then metal bars. They would force Map to smile, laugh and say how happy she was, during the beatings. If she didn't, the beatings would get worse.

Between beatings she would be left in the kitchen, while the trio (and Fong) would continue on their meth binges and play video games. When the games got boring, they would revisit Ah Map and continue her torture.

They found uses for every kitchen appliance or item of food kept in the fridge and in the cupboards. At times they would melt plastic onto her body, and then, running out of things to melt, they would just burn her directly, followed by smearing different foods into the wounds in some sort of sick experiment in pain.

The torturers soon discovered it was easier to get to Map if she was suspended, so using electrical cabling they tied her to a hook in the ceiling, and between bouts, would leave her hanging in the air.

The torturing got worse and worse, and from here I'll leave out the details, as to be honest, their sick ingenuity does not need to be further written about.

Eventually (and no doubt mercifully), after a month of extreme torture, Ah Map passed away. She had been left in the bathroom, and died during the night.

□ The flat where the crime was committed.

The torturers could not work out what to do, so they went back to playing video games. The following day, after another all-night binge, Chan decided that Ah Map needed to be further destroyed. She was placed into the bathtub, where she was dismembered.

Her parts were boiled down, in an effort to cover the smell, the head was stripped of all flesh and placed into the Hello Kitty doll. As Chan and his associates were boiling body parts on one hot plate, they would be preparing their own meals on the other... at times, using the same utensils in both.

Although most of the parts of Ah Maps body were disposed of, there were some remains left in the flat when the police started their investigation, along with the head in the 'Hello Kitty' doll, from which the crime received its name.

After the trial, the three men were handed life sentences with no review for parole, for a minimum of 20 years. Although the testimony from Ah Fong was found to be sound, and the evidence found in the flat spoke volumes, the three men were only convicted of manslaughter and unlawful imprisonment

□ One of the convicted being taken from court.

The jury found that the men had not killed Ah Map with intent, but was rather just an affect of the continual abuse.

Before the apartment block where the crime took place was demolished, it became a ground for many people who wanted to make contact with the spirit of Ah Map. People who visited the flat, specifically the kitchen, say that many candles could be found burning in small circles on the floor and on cupboards.

When Ah Fong was asked how they could all take part in such a horrific crime she replied “She was broken and playing with her wasn’t so much fun after that, but we carried on anyway. There wasn’t anything else to do”

“I did it for fun. Just to see what it was like to hurt someone.”

For her testimony Ah Fong recieved total immunity from prosecution.

Allegedly she was the victim of the sinister and depraved

Japanese Satanist hate-cult

"Hello Kitty"

Hello Kitty was apparently started when a mother of a child dying of cancer made a pact with the Lord Of The Underworld ™. If The Devil spared her child's life then in return she would start a toy company that payed homage to him. Makes sense right? I mean whowouldn't look at Hello Kitty stuff and not think 'homage to the Devil'?

Another surprisingly depressing urban legend says that Hello Kitty was first drawn by a child of an abusive parent. According to this legend she drew the cat without a mouth because she wanted a character to confide in that couldn't tell about the abuse and get her in trouble.

Hello Kitty is a Japanese animated tv series, broadcast here in the States on the Family Channel, and also on Toon Disney. Parents, do not be fooled by the lies! Yes, Hello Kitty, or as I like to call it "HELL-o Kitty" is actually a dangerous hate-Cult! If you need evidence, you just need to look at the FACT it has the word "HELL" in it's name! At this very moment your kids are being brainwashing into it's sinister and depraved way of life.

If not caught in time, your child will start showing signs of a violent nature, disregard for authority, hate for their parents, and disrespect for school teachers and society soon follow. Your child may lash out at you, start shouting profanity in the street, and try to attack random passers-by while out shopping. This is just the start of the trouble you face, if your child gets involved in the HELLo Kitty cult.

Your child may also purchase a 'Hello Kitty' doll, which they will worship as a false Idol. They may even place this doll in some sort of 'shrine' in their bedroom, and will offer it blood, sacrificed pets, and human hair. If you see any Hello Kitty materials in their bedroom, you must take them out back, and burn them immediately! Your child may start protesting, cursing you, and acting out of character. Pay no attention to their protests! This is a sign that the cult have a hold over her!

15 Facts about Hello Kitty

Anthropologist/Hello Kitty expert Christine R. Yano told the L.A. Times that our favorite cat is actually not a cat at all, but a girl. More specifically, “she’s a cartoon character. She is a little girl. She is a friend. But she is not a cat. She’s never depicted on all fours. She walks and sits like a two-legged creature.” Just when we thought we’d gotten a straight answer, a PR rep from Hello Kitty’s parent company Sanrio countered Yano’s claim and said the organization “never said she was a human.” So what is she then, a nebulous nothing-species?

Sanrio says Hello Kitty is the personification of a cat in the same way that Mickey Mouse is neither a human nor an ordinary mouse. “Hello Kitty was done in the motif of a cat,” the company said. “It’s going too far to say that Hello Kitty is not a cat.” These conflicting answers are very suspicious. If Hello Kitty is this sketchy in the explanation of what she even is, then what other lies is she living? As it turns out, Hello Kitty has a whole complicated backstory that most of us have heard nothing about. If there’s nothing to hide, why wasn’t she more transparent about her past? The story of her origin is full of holes. Here are 15 facts about Hello Kitty that most of us never knew. They may make you question what kind of scheme Hello Kitty may be running after all.

- 1. Her full name is Kitty White. Though in the first few years of her existence, she was bleakly known as “the white cat with no name.” That’s kind of sad.
- 2. She is five apples tall, which is apparently an actual measurement of height in her world.

- 3. She has a twin sister named Mimmy and parents named Mary and George. George works hard but still finds time for the kiddos. Mary loves to cook and do housework. Her grandfather Anthony likes to tell stories while Grandma Margaret likes to sit around and sew, because she is a woman and naturally Sanrio would be boring and sexist and give all the women domestic hobbies. All of her family members are the same not-quite-cat/not-quite-human species that Sanrio describes Hello Kitty to be.
- 4. Mimmy totally got the shaft and is basically the boring twin. This chick is described as very feminine and shy, which really says nothing about what her actual personality is like, but she spends so much time traipsing around in her sister's shadow that she's probably forgotten what her own identity is anyway. She enjoys sewing and "dreaming of marriage," probably because Hello Kitty hogged any opportunity there was in the family to shine as a successful individual and marriage is the only original thing Mimmy can think of that Hello Kitty hasn't tried yet. Or, you know, because of the woman thing again.
- 5. Mimmy and Hello Kitty are allegedly BFFs. I find this hard to believe because of the aforementioned inequalities between the two sisters, but we'll go with it. While Hello Kitty wears a red ribbon on her left ear with blue overalls, Mimmy wears a yellow ribbon on her right ear with red overalls, which really just makes them look even more matchy-matchy.
- 6. Even though Sanrio is a Japanese company, Hello Kitty is British. She was born in the suburbs of London.
- 7. She's right-brained and caring. Well, so she says, but I imagine Mimmy may feel differently. Her favorite subjects in school are English, music and art. She loves baking, origami, tennis, and according to her Sanrio bio, "other cute little things" (read: if it's twee enough, she'll dig it).
- 8. While she is not a cat, she does have a pet cat that look suspiciously similar to her (besides walking on all fours). Her name is Charmmy Kitty, and she is super chill and "fond of shiny things." Charmmy Kitty was a gift from Hello Kitty's father. No word on whether Mimmy was also gifted with a pet to play with from her dad or just told to go twiddle her thumbs.
- 9. Hello Kitty has lots of critter pals in the world of Sanrio. A seal named Mori lives in her backyard, though I'm not sure how many backyards in the London suburbs are equipped to host seals (yet another hole in Kitty's story!). She also has a squirrel friend named Rory. She met Rory when she was gathering flowers in the forest, and he taught her lots of "neat stuff" — Sanrio's words, not mine — about the woods. At school, Hello Kitty hangs out with a diverse group of caring friends like bears, sheep, dogs and badgers.
- 10. She has a close childhood friend named Dear Daniel. He's described as fashionable, sensitive, good at dancing, and an aspiring celebrity. He gave Hello Kitty a hamster named Sugar. It sounds like they're either destined to fall in love when they grow up or she's destined to be his beard, though a bear classmate named Tippy has a major crush on Kitty, so Daniel better act fast if he doesn't want to lose her.

- 11. Despite being a perpetual third grader, she was created 39 years ago. This totally explains those '70s-style jumpers she seems to love. Her birthday is November 1, which means she's a Scorpio.
- 12. Hello Kitty didn't have any kind of TV series or anything else involving a plot (like a book or film) about her until 1992. Until then, she only existed as an image on merchandise, so this entire suspicious, frenzied story of her past wasn't really even necessary.
- 13. Sanrio is still churning out characters left and right in hopes of hitting the jackpot again like they did with Hello Kitty's fame. A recent attempt was a pink bunny created in 2012 who was questionably named Bonbonribbon. Not sure why they couldn't dust off Mimmy and give her a shot at fame after waiting in the wings for decades.
- 14. Hello Kitty has no mouth. You've probably already noticed this, but I find it somewhat sketchy. Like, what other side to her personality is she trying to hide by not showing us her full facial expression? Hello Kitty's official designer told Time that the mouthless phenomenon is "so that people who look at her can project their own feelings onto her face, because she has an expressionless face. Kitty looks happy when people are happy. She looks sad when they are sad. For this psychological reason, we thought she shouldn't be tied to any emotion — and that's why she doesn't have a mouth." Hmmm.
- 15. Hello Kitty has her own jet plane, her own branded album, and several theme parks. She even has her own maternity hospital with her face adorned on all its baby blankets so she can be the first thing newborns see when they come into the world. Whatever throne of lies Hello Kitty is sitting on, it's working for her. Her suspiciously adorable face is taking over the world.
